

Commission on Independent Schools

Standards and Indicators

Islamic Schools Edition

An added focus for study in this edition: “The school demonstrates a clear commitment to its Islamic identity in the mission and programs of the school.”

This edition was prepared collaboratively by the Commission on Independent Schools and the Council of Islamic Schools of North America. Indicators related to Islamic identity have been added to several Standards to prompt a special focus within the general reflection, assessment, and planning of the Self-Study. (Indicators relating to the Islamic identity are in bold.) A separate section found on page 12, Part II of the Self-Study, draws together insights concerning Islamic identity and formulates plans to enhance this central element of mission.

Founded 1885

New England Association of Schools and Colleges Commission on Independent Schools

Mission Statement

CIS engages member schools in a comprehensive peer review accreditation process that provides assurance of quality and serves as a catalyst for innovation, improvement and excellence.

We support the efforts of schools, with their diverse missions, to meet the current and emerging needs of their students and to achieve long-term institutional health.

As world leaders in accreditation with our partners at NEASC (founded in 1885), we promote an understanding of the changing educational landscape, and generate relevant discourse and action in the global educational community.

Core Principles

Our schools benefit from our continuous and systematic peer review accreditation process, one that integrates both internal voice and external perspective. We hold our schools responsible for improving and transforming themselves, through self-study and reflection. The ultimate objective is for our schools to design a sustainable future, which is consistent with their respective missions in serving their students, and responsive to a rapidly changing environment.

Standards for Accreditation and Indicators: Islamic Schools Edition

Accreditation of an institution by NEASC indicates that it meets or exceeds NEASC Standards and criteria for the assessment of institutional quality periodically applied through a peer group review process. An accredited school is one which has available the necessary resources to achieve its stated purposes through appropriate educational programs, is substantially doing so, and gives reasonable evidence that it will continue to do so in the foreseeable future. Institutional integrity is also addressed through accreditation.

Accreditation has two faces: quality assurance and school improvement. Attention to the former has proved essential in defending the independence of schools and providing relief from external regulation. The primary function of accreditation, however, is school improvement.

Independent schools must meet all fifteen Standards for Accreditation that are published here. If a school is found not to be in compliance with one or more, the Commission on Independent Schools will set a date by which the Standard(s) must be met if the school is to retain its accreditation.

The Commission has established lists of “suggested indicators” for each Standard that it feels represent good practices and that it encourages schools to meet. The indicators provide an excellent starting point for discussion in Standard sub-committees. Schools are not required to comply with all indicators or develop all of the “plans” that are mentioned, however, and are welcome to submit other data and information to document their compliance with the Standards.

Self-Study Part II: Reflection, Recommendations, and Issues for Further Discussion

An assignment as comprehensive and self-reflective as the preparation of Part I of the Self-Study will generate a variety of future oriented questions, concerns, ideas, recommendations, and commitments from those who participate in drafting it and those who review it before submission to NEASC. Part II of the Self-Study asks the school to draw together and prioritize these ideas into a thoughtful, reflective, creative summary of the school's most significant concerns, hopes, and dreams for the future.

For the Islamic Schools Edition of the Self-Study, Part II is divided into two parts.

Part II. A. (Islamic Identity)

High quality Islamic schools provide an environment where Islam is declared, its tenants are followed, and its values are actualized within the schools. An Islamic ethos and God-consciousness permeate throughout the school community.

Indicators related to Islamic identity are included under more than half of the Standards for Accreditation to prompt reflection and evaluation by sub-committees in every area of school life. Part II. A. of the Self-Study is intended to draw together the work of the several sub-committees regarding Islamic identity and focus on overall observations and conclusions that emerge from the entire Self-Study. Reflections and recommendations concerning Islamic identity should represent a consensus of the professional staff.

Part II. B. (Overall Reflection, Recommendations, and Issues for Further Discussion)

Part II of the Self-Study is intended to be a macro-look at major findings, presented in a one to three page report. The school may present its findings in both Part A and B in any of several formats:

- As recommendations that are self-identified and are action-oriented
- As issues for further discussion in which the goal is to extend important conversations generated by the Self-Study
- As a combination of both action items and discussion items

Key elements to discuss within the report are:

- Report of major findings and conclusions
- Prioritization of the findings with explanation
- Specific action items for any Standard(s) on which the school rates itself as Standard Unmet
- Overview of implementation strategies to address the conclusions, including:
- Part II committee membership
- Meeting schedule
- Timeline
- Any specific procedures

Part II of the Self-Study, once completed, becomes a central resource for future planning at the school. Quite often, it will evolve nicely into the school's next multi-year strategic plan. In the short run, it is a vital resource to the school's advancement team.
